WHERE TO BEGIN?

We think it is incredibly important for all students to have an awareness of the issues that have arisen in America, but also of the issues still standing in the UK. Racism and injustice is certainly present in the UK today.

We have provided a booklet of information to direct you to some key resources with very digestible information. This is our recommended starting point, and we believe it is in the best interest of everyone in our community to read over some of these resources to help foster an understanding environment.

This booklet includes a range of books, articles, donation links and videos which have been divided up into sections to ensure the volume isn’t overwhelming or off-putting! Everything is also split up on the contents page (which is hyperlinked - just click on the relevant heading to direct you to that part of the document).

The first section contains links to direct you towards websites/documents with large amounts of information and ways to help. All subsequent sections contain resources that we have picked from these lists that we think would be a great starting point and quite essential reads.

We would like to draw particular attention to the sections highlighting quick things you can do now and to those about British racism. Additionally, nearly everything here can be done without money (including ways to donate).

Please read through this at your own leisure and we do hope you take the time to read, watch, and donate to support our community.

Ways you can help - this is from Black Lives Matter. It’s incredibly comprehensive and updated continually. It's essentially the masterlist of all masterlists and has LOTS of information and so we wanted to include it at the beginning of this document.

DOs & DON’Ts

DOs…

- Recognise your own white/non-black privilege
- Take action as well as saying the words - with individuals as well as on the internet
- Use your own agency and platforms - including at the ballot box
- Listen to, and amplify, black voices
- Educate yourself about historical, as well as contemporary, racism
- Check in with your black friends
- Be an advocate for mental health - be aware how others may be affected by what you say
- Create a long-term strategy - how will you be an ally for the rest of your life?

DON’Ts…

- Make it about you
- Expect to fully understand something you have not experienced
- Ask your black friends to educate you when there are resources already available
- Think that sharing this list means you have done enough
- Expect to be able to engage with this and still feel comfortable
- Share sensitive or potentially triggering videos/content
- Undermine people’s reactions from events you might feel disconnected from
- Think this is something you should not fight for because it does not negatively affect you

How can change be made in all parts of uni life?

- Drama: Footlights put together this document about black people that have shaped the comedy today, along with lots of useful ways to get proactive.

- Music: Countless black artists have made contributions to the musical world which are often taken for granted. The Institute for Composer Diversity is doing daily music ‘spotlights’ throughout June of the black composers who have often gone unnoticed, as well as publishing loads of research on racial-musical trends and underrepresented composers.

- Sports: Here’s an article from 2018 about the racism still prominent in televised sport.

- English: Although books are prescribed for courses, you have the power to choose your leisure reading so make it count. Do book reviews, consolidate what you have learnt and perhaps share this with others you feel like can benefit from this. Here’s an article to get you started.

If you feel passionate about issues raised, write about it and get talking.

Anyone can start the conversation.
